64% in Morocco Covered by Client Protection Campaign
Italy's MicroFinanza Rating recently certified two Moroccan microfinance institutions (MFIs), Al Amana and Attawfiq Micro-Finance, as operating within the Smart Campaign's Client Protection Principles. With a third institution, Tamwil El Fellah, having received certification in 2016, 64 percent of the customers of Moroccan MFIs are now served under the campaign, which is a program of the Center for Financial Inclusion at US-based NGO Accion. The principles address “responsible” pricing, privacy concerns, preventing over-indebtedness and other issues. Al Amana has a gross loan portfolio of USD 251 million. Of its 333,000 active loans, 43 percent are issued to women. Attawfiq has a gross loan portfolio of USD 230 million and 270,000 active borrowers served via 440 branches. March 29, 2017

EFSE Loans $20m QNB Finansbank of Turkey for Agriculture
The European Fund for Southeast Europe (EFSE), a microfinance investment vehicle led by German development bank Kreditanstalt für Wiederaufbau (KfW), recently announced it has provided a senior loan of USD 20 million to QNB Finansbank, a Turkey-based unit of the government-owned Qatar National Bank. QNB plans to use the funds to expand its agricultural lending in rural Turkey. In support of the transaction, EFSE will provide the bank with “training for agricultural banking, financial literacy workshops, seminars for local agricultural unions and cooperatives, and the development of reports on trends.” QNB reports total assets equivalent to USD 28 billion, a total loan portfolio of USD 17 billion and customer deposits of USD 14 billion. EFSE reports a gross loan portfolio of USD 1.0 billion. March 27, 2017

Mastercard, Unilever Pilot MSME Tech Effort in Kenya
Mastercard, a US-based payments technology company, and Unilever, a UK-based supplier of consumer goods, recently partnered to assist small-scale entrepreneurs in developing countries with buying supplies and selling goods via digital technologies. The partners’ first project will be to market Mastercard’s digital payment platforms via Unilever’s network of distributors in Kenya. The aim is to reach 5.5 million low-income people in an unspecified number of countries by 2020. Mastercard reports assets of USD 16 billion, and Unilever had 2016 sales equivalent to USD 57 billion. Bank of Ghana Introduces Logo for Licensed MFIs
The Bank of Ghana (BoG), the financial regulator of the country, is introducing a logo that microfinance institutions (MFIs) can display to help consumers “distinguish between credible, licensed microfinance institutions and unlicensed ones.” BoG also is requiring MFIs to monitor and report on their operations periodically. Fines and other sanctions will apply to those failing to report properly as well to those failing to meet other requirements such as maintaining required capital levels. March 20, 2017

Scott Brown Stepping Down as CEO of VisionFund
VisionFund International, a nonprofit with microfinance operations in approximately 30 countries, recently informed MicroCapital that its President and CEO Scott Brown will be leaving the organization at the end of March. The identity of his successor or successors has not yet been announced. Reflecting on his 10 years with VisionFund, Mr Brown said, “VisionFund is recognised for its social performance. This, combined with solid risk management, attracts social investors who want to impact people living below the poverty line, but also want to have safe investments on their balance sheet.” During 2016, VisionFund loaned USD 729 million to approximately 1.2 million people, about 75 percent of whom are women. It is a unit of US-based NGO World Vision, which reports serving 99 countries and 2015 revenues of USD 2.7 billion. March 19, 2017

Whole Planet Raises $2.2m to Support MFIs in 11 Countries
The Whole Planet Foundation, an affiliate of US-based grocer Whole Foods Market, recently informed MicroCapital that it has secured donations of USD 2.2 million toward its goal of raising USD 3.2 million by the end of March to donate through new microfinance institution partnerships in two US cities and existing ones in Canada, Chile, the Democratic Republic of Congo, the Dominican Republic, India, Israel, Sierra Leone, the Solomon Islands, Zambia and Scotland. The US-based efforts involve expanding the foundation’s work with Grameen America to include Miami, Florida, and the Harlem neighborhood of New York City. Grameen America is a US-based NGO serving 12 US cities with total assets of USD 62 million. The goal of the Whole Planet Foundation, which holds assets of USD 12 million, is to increase the incomes of poor women in regions from which Whole Foods sources its products. March 17, 2017

ASA Philippines to Issue $40m in Bonds to Expand Loan Portfolio
ASA Philippines, a microfinance NGO, recently announced it will issue the local currency equivalent of USD 40 million in bonds to fund new and existing projects through 2021. One of these is lending to women entrepreneurs in amounts from USD 120 to USD 200 with a flat interest rate of 15 percent for six months. ASA staff members visit these borrowers weekly to collect payments in the amount of USD 1 per USD 20 borrowed. Established in 2004, ASA has total assets and properties of USD 210 million, a loan portfolio of USD 180 million, 1.3 million active borrowers and 900 branches as of 2017. As of 2015, it reported total deposits of USD 66 million. ASA also provides insurance, scholarships and business development training. March 15, 2017

Indonesia Seeks to Shift KUR Microloans to Productive Sectors
The Indonesian government recently announced it plans to grow the portion of its Kredit Usaha Rakyat (KUR) program that is used for agriculture, fishing and manufacturing from 22 percent of the program total to 40 percent. The majority of KUR lending supports trading and service industries. During 2016, banks participating in KUR disbursed loans totaling the equivalent of USD 7.1 billion to cooperatives and micro-, small and medium-sized enterprises. The government, which guarantees that the KUR loans will be repaid, plans to boost the total to USD 8.2 billion during 2017. KUR, which was founded in 2007, offers end-borrowers annual interest rates of 9 percent. March 10, 2017

Tigo Rwanda Launches TigoNshoboza Mobile Microloans

Tigo Rwanda Limited, a unit of Sweden’s Millicom that offers mobile telecommunications services, recently announced it has launched a loan service called TigoNshoboza, which allows users of Tigo Cash in Rwanda to access loans via their mobile wallets. The terms of the loans range from 7 to 21 days, with the initial loan size based on the customer’s usage of Tigo airtime and the Tigo Cash service. Upon timely repayment, customers may be eligible for larger loans. The service, which is in its pilot phase, does not require users to have a bank account. Launched in 2009, Tigo Rwanda has 3 million subscribers. Millicom, which provides telecommunication and media services, reports total assets of USD 12 billion and 60 million customers in 14 countries in Africa and Latin America. March 8, 2017

IFAD, DiD Renew PEA-Youth Partnership in Cameroon

Développement international Desjardins (DiD), an arm of Canada’s cooperative Desjardins Group, recently received additional funding from the UN’s International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) to extend its participation in the Youth Agropastoral Entrepreneurship Promotion Program (PEA-Youth) in Cameroon through 2018. PEA-Youth works with rural entrepreneurs aged 18 to 35, seeking to support the “development of viable agropastoral businesses; access to financial services; and improvements to the organizational, policy, institutional and legal framework.” IFAD is planning to lend a total of USD 22.5 million through the project from 2014 through 2020, with an additional USD 23 million to be raised from other partners, which have yet to be identified. DiD, which provides technical support and investment for the community finance sector, reports a loan portfolio equivalent to USD 57 million. The Desjardins Group, which offers banking, insurance, securities and investment services, reports USD 185 billion in assets. March 8, 2017

Accion Exits Clip, Provider of Payment-card Readers in Mexico

Accion Venture Lab, an investment vehicle of US-based NGO Accion, recently sold its stake in Clip, a company whose products allow Mexican businesses to accept payment cards via devices that plug in to smartphones. Clip, which has offices in the US and Mexico, primarily serves micro-, small and medium-sized enterprises. Venture Lab began supporting Clip in 2013. Both the purchase and sale prices of the stake remain confidential, as do financial data on Clip. Founded in 1961, Accion has partner microfinance institutions serving 6 million borrowers in 32 countries in Africa, the Americas and Asia. March 7, 2017

ADB Invests $1.5m in Equity in India’s M-CRIL to Expand in Asia

Micro-Credit Ratings International Limited (M-CRIL), an India-based provider of rating and advisory services to the microfinance industry, recently sold an unspecified portion of its equity to the Asian Development Bank (ADB), a development finance institution with 67 member countries. A goal of the funding is to help M-CRIL expand in Cambodia, China, Indonesia and Nepal. ABD Principal Investment Specialist Anshukant Taneda said the investment will help “the microfinance sector in addressing risk management, transparency, and governance issues resulting in expanded financial inclusion and reduced poverty levels in Asia.” Founded in 1998 by Indian nonprofit EDA Rural Systems, M-CRIL merged with its parent company in 2016. It has provided evaluations of governance, management, financial performance, social performance and client protection practices for organizations in 33 countries. March 3, 2017

IFC to Advise Kosovo’s AFK on Agricultural Services

The International Finance Corporation (IFC), a member of the US-based World Bank Group that aims to increase economic growth in developing countries, recently announced that it will advise the Agency for Finance (AFK), a microlender in Kosovo, on lending strategy and methods to support the development of the country’s agricultural sector. As part of the project, IFC will assist with financial and business training sessions that AFK plans to offer to Kosovar farmers. AFK CEO Vahdet Anadoli said that his organization “will continue to develop our agri-lending to help our clients by providing customized working capital and access to finance for different stakeholders along sustainable supply chains.” The initiative is supported by the Austrian and Hungarian governments. AFK reports total assets of USD 15 million and 10,000 active borrowers. March 1, 2017

Cutting Costs with Tech: What the...Touch?!

Earlier this month, I had the honor of participating in UNCDF’s MicroLead workshop, where financial service providers from all over Africa (and a few from Myanmar) met to share their experiences in promoting small-balance savings. Savings is one of the tougher challenges for most financial institutions, particularly in the poorest countries. Margins are small or negative, so operations need to be lean. The solution is to have a good business model that combines demand-side incentives for people to use and grow their accounts via low-cost channels along with strategies to reduce the burden of these accounts on the organization.

Many financial service providers have been focusing more on reducing costs than incentivizing customers. On the surface, this seems easier than convincing low-income households to save in a bank account. But it is not always so. Linkages with mobile providers are hard for smaller institutions because they have little bargaining power. Developing agent networks is operationally complex and can be costly. At the MicroLead workshop, a representative from Opportunity International noted that its efforts in one country to shift to “low-touch” customer engagement has not yet allowed it to reduce reliance on brick-and-mortar channels, leaving the organization with the higher cost of maintaining two parallel systems.

“Low-cost” is often synonymous with “low-touch.” But low-touch is not a great way to build customer engagement. Shifting from face-to-face branch visits to SMS contact and branchless or mobile transactions can help address the cost side, but as “touch” is lost, so might be opportunities to promote consistent savings. At the workshop, I was inspired by the efforts of Caisse d’Epargne et de Credit (CEC) of Cameroon. Eric Kenkola, CEC’s impressive Information and Communications Director, and his team have built an app-based mobile POS system for CEC’s roaming agents. It boasts the capacity to provide paper receipts for clients from a small printer that agents wear on a belt clip. It cost CEC only USD 16,000 to develop, and the equipment costs one third of the price of traditional POS devices. “We are small and just couldn’t afford the existing solutions that we looked into,” Eric modestly explained; “so we built our own.” CEC’s next challenge is making sure roaming agents engage with customers and encourage savings.

Just like Opportunity International, my local CVS drug store tried to reduce “touch” with customers a few years ago by switching out its cashiers for checkout kiosks. For months, our elderly neighbors (and sometimes I) would call an employee over to help with the kiosk, requiring the employee to do virtually the same tasks that he or she would have done at a cash register. Since then, a more orderly and cost-effective segmentation of touch has been established. Elderly (and chatty) customers can use the one remaining cash register, but the rest of us are stuck listening to a robot repeatedly accuse us of stealing items even as we are trying to scan and pay for them. I am not sure that financial institutions focused only on cutting costs will find this kind of low-touch model to be as profitable. CVS’s cranky robot has added convenience, but reduced my loyalty.

PAPER WRAP-UPS

Digital Finance Interoperability & Financial Inclusion: A 20-Country Scan

By Pablo Garcia Arabehety, Gregory Chen, William Cook and Claudia McKay; published by CGAP (Consultative Group to Assist the Poor); December 2016; 16 pages, available at http://www.cgap.org/sites/default/files/interoperability.pdf

Using data from 20 countries in Africa, the Americas, Asia and the Middle East, the authors of this study review the status of interoperability, which allows a user of “a digital financial service account to make specific kinds of transactions across two or more providers.”

The authors find that interoperability is generally available in the assessed markets, but progress remains slow. Out of the 20 countries considered: (1) six pursued a centrally planned approach to interoperability; (2) four had non-bank payment providers making joint efforts to achieve interoperability; and (3) multiple approaches were used simultaneously in 10.

The Africa and Middle East Alternative Finance Benchmarking Report

The authors of this study estimate that USD 475 million was made available in Africa and the Middle East via equity crowdfunding, online microfinancing and peer-to-peer lending between 2013 and 2015, with Israel accounting for USD 125 million of this total.

Report on State of Financial Inclusion in Kerala

While government data indicate that the Indian state of Kerala has achieved “comprehensive financial inclusion,” Dr Nair concludes that banking services in Kerala focus mostly on savings, while access to credit is substantially less prevalent.

Vision Microfinance is an appeal to combat poverty in a meaningful and sustainable way.
